Welcome to Beacon Bytes

OSHEAN is starting the new year with a return of the newsletter communication we had provided to members over the years. Welcome to the first edition of Beacon Bits! As many of you know, Beacon is the name of our network, hence we couldn't resist the pun! The newsletters of the past were branded under the name ("The Bridge"), but we decided to retire that name for reasons obvious to any Rhode Islander!

Our aim is to reinvigorate the ways we keep in contact with our membership. We tend to struggle at times with communicating the fast pace of change in keeping our primary objectives of service to the membership front and center. This is the first of a couple of new initiatives to bring some consistent vehicles of communication to our community.

We hope you enjoy the first issue and please note that we will be wide open to any member who wishes to highlight some of their work and share with the community at large.

Cheers,
Dave

Member Story

Rhode Island Research Administration Collaborative (RIRAC)

Earlier this year it was announced that five esteemed Rhode Island higher education institutions, all part of the OSHEAN member community, have been awarded $3 million in funding from the National Science Foundation (NSF). This funding will support the establishment of the Rhode Island Research Administration Collaborative (RIRAC), a first-of-its-kind initiative in the Ocean State. The participating institutions—Roger Williams University, Providence College, Rhode Island College, Rhode Island School of Design, and Salve Regina University—are set to transform the research landscape in Rhode Island and beyond.

This need was particularly pronounced as numerous residents, especially senior citizens, found themselves confined to their homes, increasingly reliant on digital connectivity.

The steep costs of broadband services exacerbated an already wide digital divide within the community.
